Early, Mail-In Voting Available For Fall Election

By SCOTT JACKSON

Massachusetts voters will have the option to cast their ballots by mail or through in-person early voting during this fall's state elections and in future state and federal elections.

Gov. Charlie Baker recently signed into law the VOTES Act, which permanently codifies expanded voter access first made popular in Massachusetts during 2020, following votes by the Senate and House approving the legislation earlier this session. This sweeping voter reform encompasses a number of programs and supports to increase voter access, including mail-in and early voting.

"Democracy is a process through which everyone has a voice. We need to ensure those voices are being heard," Sen. John Keenan (D-Quincy) said in a statement. "These provisions have made voting so much easier and efficient for so many Massachusetts residents, ultimately steering us toward a more representative and responsive government. Getting more people involved in the process will allow elected officials to get a better sense of what our constituents want."

Massachusetts saw record high voter turnouts in 2020 thanks to expanded voter access, Keenan said. Approximately 3.6 million residents cast ballots in 2020, totaling 76 percent of all registered voters. More than 40 percent of voters cast ballots by mail in the 2020 general election, with another 23 percent participating during early voting. Similarly, more than 1.7 million people voted in the 2020 state primary, the highest number of voters ever in a state primary. Close to half

Foundation Formed For Adams Presidential Center

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch on Tuesday announced the establishment of a non-profit foundation that will oversee the planning and fundraising for the new Adams Presidential Center, a 100,000 square foot facility in Quincy Center that will honor the legacies of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams as well as First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Adams.

Among those joining Koch at Tuesday's announcement were the first three members of the foundation's board – Gen. Joseph Dunford, the retired chairman of the Joint Chiefs of all voters voted by mail during the primary.

"Instead of a mass mailing of ballots as some believe and which I am opposed to, Massachusetts voters will now be able to receive a mail-in ballot through a simple application process, making voting more inclusive," Keenan said. "Voters who are physically unable to get to a polling place and voters with inflexible work schedules will now have fewer barriers to participating in the democratic process."

The VOTES Act allows registered voters to vote by mail for any presidential, state or municipal primary or election. Communities like Quincy that do not hold their local elections on the same day as state or federal elections can opt out of early voting by mail for municipal elections. In Quincy's case, the City Council would have to vote to opt out of mail-in balloting following a public hearing, said City Clerk Nicole Crispo.

The law allows registered voters to request a mail-in ballot for all applicable preliminary, primary and final elections in the calendar year. It requires the secretary of the commonwealth to send out mail-in ballot applications, with return postage guaranteed, to registered voters before each presidential primary, state primary, and biennial state election. The secretary is also required to create an online portal to allow voters to request a mail-in ballot. The law further requires mail-in ballot applications to be posted on every municipality's website and guarantees return postage for all mail-in ballots.

In addition, the VOTES Act also enshrines into law two weeks, including two weekends, of early voting for biennial state elections and one week, including one weekend, of early voting for presidential and state primaries. Municipalities are required to establish accessible early voting sites and larger communities must have sites open for longer hours during the early voting period.

The law also allows municipalities to opt-in to early voting in-person for any other municipal election not held on the same day as a state or federal election.

For the upcoming elections this fall, early voting will be available from Aug. 27 to Sept. 2 ahead of the Sept. 6 state primary and from Oct. 22 to Nov. 4 ahead of the Nov. 8 final election.

Crispo said she was still finalizing the early voting locations and hours for the fall.

The law also provides electronic voting options for voters with disabilities and service members. It enables a voter with disabilities to request accommodations from the secretary of the commonwealth, including an accessible electronic ballot application, ballot, and voter affidavit that can be submitted electronically. It streamlines the voting process for uniformed and overseas citizens, giving them the option to vote through an electronic system approved by the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

The law also includes reforms to the voter registration process. The deadline to register to vote in any preliminary, primary or final election is now 10 days before the election, rather than the previous 20. The secretary of the commonwealth's online voter registration portal must be offered in multiple languages. The law also clarifies the automatic voter registration process.

Further, the law includes jail-based voting reforms. It helps ensure that incarcerated individuals who are currently eligible to vote can exercise their voting rights, requires correctional facilities to display and distribute voter education and election information materials as prepared by the secretary of the commonwealth, and requires facilities to assist individuals who are incarcerated and may be eligible to vote in registering, applying for and returning mail-in ballots. It also requires the secretary of the commonwealth provide guidance to local election officials about the qualifications and rights of eligible incarcerated voters and how to process their applications to register and vote and requires facilities to provide voting information and a voter registration form upon an individual's release from the facility.

The VOTES act also provides flexibility for local officials and improvements to election administration. It gives municipalities the option to set up secure drop boxes for mail-in ballots, allows election officials to pre-process mail-in and early voting ballots by opening up envelopes and verifying signatures in advance of Election Day, eases the process by which election officials can appoint and fill vacancies in poll workers, requires the secretary of the commonwealth to join the Electronic Registration Information Center by July 1 to help Massachusetts keep more accurate voting rolls and instructs the secretary of the commonwealth to conduct a comprehensive public awareness campaign to highlight the provisions in the bill.

15 Complete QC Nursing Program

Fifteen students who have successfully completed Quincy College's Practical Nursing certificate program were honored at the program's traditional pinning ceremony on June 28.

Two of the students -- Kelcie Bither and Kacey O'Malley – are Quincy residents.

The ceremony at Quincy High School's Lloyd Hill Auditorium marked the culmination of students' classroom instruction and clinical training and formally represents their transition from student to nurse. The ceremony concluded with students reciting the International Council of Nurses' Pledge, which affirms the common goals of nurses around the world.

Quincy College President Dr. Richard DeCristofaro commended the graduates for their choice of a career focused on "caring, compassion and empathy. You will make a difference in the lives of others, and you will come to appreciate the importance of demonstrating kindness in your every interaction with patients," he said.

In addition to its 10-month Practical Nursing certificate program, Quincy College also offers a two-year associate's in science degree in nursing. Visit www.quincycollege.edu/nursing for information about both programs, as well as to learn more about a new partnership between Quincy College and Eastern Nazarene College that offers Quincy College nursing students housing and meal-plan options on the nearby Eastern Nazarene campus.

More Funds Needed For Public Safety HQ

Koch Says He Will Ask City Council For More Money This Fall, Will Not Scale Back Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

Additional funding will be needed for the construction of Quincy's new public safety headquarters, Mayor Thomas Koch said recently, even as the contractor continues to try to lower the cost of the project.

The new building will house the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, as well as the Emergency Management Department. It will be constructed in the vicinity of 1 Sea St., where the police station is currently located.

The City Council in April 2021 approved a $120 million bond to pay for the construction of the new building and an adjoining 267-car garage. That bond also included funds for nearby infrastructure improvements, such as those planned for Broad Street, Sea Street and Southern Artery. A $32 million bond approved in December 2019 included money to design the new

Quincycles Announces Summer Bike Education, Learn To Ride Classes

Quincycles invites the public to join the group on bicycle rides around the city or to learn to ride a bike this summer.

If you never learned to ride a bike or just haven't ridden one in years, Quincycles and the Mayor's Bicycle Commission are offering two more Learn to Ride a Bike classes for adults on Wednesday, July 13 and Aug. 3 from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the South Shore YMCA parking lot.

Register for the class via the Eventbrite link at Quincycles.org because space is limited.

Irene Lutts, a Quincycles member and League of American Bicyclists certified instructor, will be teaching at the main branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library this summer. Basic Bike Maintenance will be the topic on Wednesday, July 20.

This class is not for diagnosing or repairing major fixes, but for helping you learn to know how to keep your functioning bike in riding condition. Bring your bike for a personalized experience.

On Wednesday, Aug. 10, the topic will be Bike Commuting. If gas prices have you considering trying an active transportation commute, be sure to bring your questions and concerns to this class and make your switch more comfortable.

The group continues to lead rides around Quincy every month including a casual, social morning ride on the second Saturday of the month, a longer morning ride on the third Saturdays, and more challenging hill rides on Monday evenings. Visit Quincycles.org for more details about these events.

Quincycles is a group of Quincy residents advocating for bicycle infrastructure on our city streets and promoting responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise in Quincy. More information about the group and these events and more can be found on their website at www.Quincycles.org

Should you go back to a 30-year mortgage?

People are thinking about mortgages differently. Right now we're seeing borrowers who went with shorter terms going back to a 30-year loan. Some are tapping their equity for home improvements, college tuition or to consolidate other debt at a locked-in guaranteed low rate. Others just want a more comfortable monthly payment, less stress and more cash flow. It works because mortgage rates are still historically low. And If you want, you can always pay the new 30-year loan off more aggressively... but you don't have to. Would a new 30-year mortgage make sense for you? The victims had been invited to view the process of transporting loads of stone when a cable on a vacant car snapped, throwing them off the train and over a 34-foot cliff.

Under Hitler, the Nazi Party grew into a mass movement and ruled Germany as a totalitarian state from 1933 to 1945. The Nazis controlled every aspect of German life, and all other political parties were banned.

The swarm was said to be so thick that it blocked out the sun and one could shovel the grasshoppers with a scoop. Cornstalks were eaten to the ground and fields left completely bare.

Koch: More Funds Needed For Public Safety Headquarters

building and purchase five parcels of land, among other project costs.

Koch in January said the project had been put on hold as the cost of building materials continued to rise. In a recent interview, Koch said the general contractor for the project, Suffolk Construction, is now in the process of working with subcontractors to try to lower costs.

"Suffolk, who is the general contractor, is now negotiating with subcontractors to try to get the number the best we can because, as you know, these last couple of years pricing has just gone through the roof," Koch said.

The mayor stated he would not be cutting corners on the project, pointing to the 1980s renovation to the police station as an example what happens when corners are cut.

"We're trying to do the best we can to keep it manageable without sacrificing any of the quality of the building. That's important," Koch said. "If you cut corners too much, then you're fixing things in 20 years. The police station addition was a good example of that. We were fixing things right out of the box.

"This should be a 50- to 100-year building. We pay a little bit more up front but, over time, it's definitely more efficient."

The project will require additional funding, which Koch said he would seek City Council approval for in September or October. The amount of funding needed is to be determined, he stated.

"We're going to have to go back in the fall for another appropriation, and the work they're doing now will define what that number will be," Koch said, referring to Suffolk's efforts to lower costs.

When asked if the project could be scaled down, Koch reiterated that he would not be cutting corners.

"We're doing what's called value engineering to go through the whole project and every aspect to see if the cuts can be made without sacrificing quality, and that gets really, really sticky," he said. "We're negotiating on the prices, trying to make sure we're getting the best product, but I'm not going to build some half-effort building that is going to need a roof in 20 years."

The new building had been slated to open in the fall of 2023, but it is now expected to open sometime the following year, the mayor said.

"I suspect it's probably the late summer or fall of '24," he responded when asked when the building would open.

Once complete, the new public safety headquarters will stand four stories tall and contain about 120,000 square feet of space. The new building will be located further back from Sea Street than the current police station and a new park will be located where the police station stands today.

"That whole corner will become a park with a wall very similar to Mount Wollaston, so that whole corridor will really be beautiful," Koch said. "We will dedicate it to first responders, so it will be a park in their honor."

As part of the project, Father Bill's Place will move from its location at 38 Broad St. to 39 Broad St. where a new housing resource center is slated to open in two phases starting in 2023. Koch previously told The Sun the delay in constructing the public safety headquarters meant the city would not have to find a temporary location for Father Bill's Place.

The Quincy Animal Shelter will also be moving as a result of the project. The shelter will move to a temporary home on East Squantum Street before moving into a new facility – which will also house the Police Department's K-9 unit and the city's animal control officer – on Quarry Street. City councillors approved a $15 million bond for the new building on Quarry Street last month, and the facility is expected to open in January 2024.

The parcel at 39 Broad St. is one of the five parcels the city acquired with the $32 million bond approved in 2019. With that bond, the city also purchased the Stop & Shop gas station at 450 Southern Artery, the former home of the Bryan Post at 21 Broad St., and a single-family home at 12 Field St.

The city plans to reuse the underground tanks at the gas station to fuel municipal vehicles, the new parking garage will be located roughly in the vicinity of the Bryan Post, and the home on Field Street was purchased so the city can reopen the roadway between Field Street and Broad Street.

The fifth parcel of land purchased with those funds was a vacant lot at 47 Quincy Ave., which is located across the street from the current headquarters of the Quincy Fire Department at 40 Quincy Ave. Koch has said a new firehouse could be built at 47 Quincy Ave to house the apparatus now located at department headquarters. The city had considered moving those apparatus to the public safety building on Sea Street but decided against doing so because it would increase response times to the Penn's Hill neighborhood.

Police Promotions, Firefighter Hirings Eyed

By SCOTT JACKSON

With Quincy's current police chief due to retire in the next 12 months, Mayor Thomas Koch is determining the process by which the city's next chief of police will be selected.

The city has also applied for a federal grant that would enable the hiring of more than a dozen new firefighters, Koch said.

Paul Keenan, the chief of the Quincy Police Department since 2008, will have to retire in June of 2023, when he turns 65, the mandatory retirement age for police officers and firefighters in the state.

In a recent interview, Koch said he is working to determine which process will be used to hire the city's next chief of police.

"We're looking at the options now in relation to what civil service suggests," he said. "A lot of communities now go to assessment centers, so a company comes in, actually takes over the process, does all the interviewing. They work with the city on questions and things like that. So, there are so many points assigned to part of the written exam, so many points assigned to the oral interview."

PAUL KEENAN, Quincy's police chief since 2008, will reach mandatory retirement age next June. Mayor Thomas Koch says he is determining the process by which the next police chief will be selected. Quincy Sun File Photo

"We'll get that figured out because I certainly want a smooth transition when the time comes," Koch added. "Paul has to leave in June of 2023 under the law, so we'll be ready."

The mayor said he would prefer the city's next police chief to come from within the department.

"I think our department is large enough with a lot of incredible talent that I don't think we have to look beyond the department," Koch said. "Over the years, that's been something that has been beat around the bush in different communities, you go outside, which all sounds great, but I think there is quite a learning curve when you bring someone from the outside in to get to understand the department, the dynamics of the city and so forth.

"I think it makes sense with a department our size, plenty of talent, that we do it in house."

In addition to Keenan's pending retirement, Koch said two of the department's five captains would be retiring soon; Capt. John Dougan retired July 8th and Capt. John Steele is also slated to retire.

"Captain Dougan is retiring. Captain Steele will be leaving. Over the next year there are going to be some changes. There is a couple lieutenants going out," Koch said. "That is going to trip a number of promotions."

In the same interview, Koch said the Quincy Fire Department has applied for a federal grant that would allow for the hiring of 16 new firefighters.

"The department filed a federal grant...we're waiting to hear on that. If we are successful, we will then call for the list," Koch said.

"If we're successful, it is a three-year grant and there is funding for 16 positions. We'll see what happens. We should find out this summer, so if that works, we'll probably call for a list in the fall or late summer."

The mayor said he would recuse himself from that round of hirings because his son, Thomas Koch Jr., would be among the candidates considered for the job.

"I'll be recusing myself from the process because my son is on the list," the

THIS IS AN early 1920s postcard view of Manet Beach on the south shore of Hough's Neck looking east. The large building that was at Harvey's landing is in the left center and in the distant right center is the Quincy Yacht Club. The pier on pilings extending to the right was the remains of the Steamship wharf that ran out from near the old Mear's Hotel that was just beyond today's public landing. Manet Beach in the foreground is along Edgewater Drive that was originally known as River Road probably because it faced the Fore River. March Forward Quincy, Quincy Votes! Protest SCOTUS Roe V. Wade Decision

(Editor's note: The following article was submitted by Judy Brams and other members of the March Forward Quincy Steering Committee: Melissa Schapero, Patricia Mortimer, Christine Swanson and Norma Simons Fitzgerald.)

"I am here for my pregnant wife and baby," read one of the most moving signs at the June 25th rally organized by March Forward Quincy in conjunction with another Quincy group, Quincy Votes! protesting the Supreme Court ruling overturning Roe vs Wade. Speeches, chants and sign waving, as well as sign ups to join March Forward Quincy and Quincy Votes! took place at noontime on the Hancock Adams Common.

About 200 people showed up on the Common to express their fury and fear in the wake of the ruling, some sharing their own painful stories. One young woman was 15 years old when she found out she was pregnant and realized she could never deal with a child at her age and emotional state. A physician spoke of the terrible risks this ruling would have on women's lives, how many would be lost given the US maternal mortality rates already extraordinarily high in this country. Melissa Schapero, founder of March Forward Quincy, mentioned in her remarks the risks to women as well as to the trans community, and the LGBTQIA+ community at large.

March Forward Quincy invited the City Councillors but given the short notice of the rapidly planned event most were unable to attend. Councillor Anne Mahoney was in attendance, and Councillor Nina Liang who is out of town sent her regards in solidarity. Democratic candidate for Attorney General Shannon Liss-Riordan was also in attendance.

Although the rally was peaceful, the strong sentiments expressed were grief, anger and distrust of SCOTUS and government for allowing this to happen. Yet hope was also expressed for the community to come together, continue protesting the indignity of this ruling and plan other actions. Many attendees signed up to write postcards to help get out the vote. March Forward Quincy and Quincy Votes! remind us all to make sure all who are eligible are registered to vote and have updated their status if they have recently moved.

In the most recent general election on Nov. 2, 2021, only 16.9% of registered voters in Quincy voted, according to the City Clerk's Election Summary on the city's website. We need to do better. Your vote is your voice. Make sure you're registered to vote at your current address and know who you're voting for in the next election.

The next election will be the primary, which is scheduled for Sept. 6, 2022.

Suggests Nordic Ski Track For FB Golf Course

(Editor's note: A copy of the following letter was submitted for publication.)

Dear Commissioner of Natural Resources Murphy:

Sadly I was not able to attend the most recent meeting that was arranged at the clubhouse at Furnace Brook Golf Course. Duty calls.

I'm told, and I've read that the meeting was a success in bringing our community together. Congratulations.

If I may, I'd like to encourage your staff to look into creating a cross-country ski track: a smaller version of what Weston Ski Track does with the Charles River Recreation and the DCR.

If this task should be recommended to another department, please feel free to forward this recommendation or to let me know whom I could forward it to.

Personally, I enjoy cross-country skiing at FBGC as is, when it snows, but snowmaking for groomed, skill-level-appropriate trails with ski rentals and lessons could help maximize our investment in the new clubhouse and renovations for year-round activity.

It would also provide cross-country skiing when it hasn't snowed, eliminating the need to travel west of Boston, especially with the difficulty in making reservations at Weston Ski Track due to the high demand.

This could supplement the ideas regarding bringing back the rope-tow for skiers and lazy sledders, for example.

If I may be of assistance, don't hesitate to contact me.

Thank you.

WHAT'S COOKING

with

Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Large Rigatoni With Chicken Thighs

By MARIE

Today's recipe contains two of my favorite foods – large rigatoni and chicken thighs. Although I usually like chicken thighs with bone-in, this recipe uses boneless thighs and is equally delicious.

Ingredients and Directions:

4 or 5 boneless thighs - cut into bite-sized pieces

Cornflake crumbs or Panko bread crumbs – enough for coating chicken

1 egg beaten with a little milk added

Enough flour for coating chicken – start with a half a cup

1 28-ounce can crushed tomatoes

2 garlic cloves chopped

1 small onion, diced (optional)

1 teaspoon of basil or oregano

1-pound large Rigatoni

½ cup parmesan cheese

2 tablespoons olive oil

In a sauce pan, in the hot oil sauté the garlic and onion (if you are using onion,) add the crushed tomatoes and basil.

Cook covered for 15 to 20 minutes, stirring occasionally.

While the sauce is simmering start coating the chicken thighs.

First dip thighs in flour, then the egg mixture and then the crumbs.

Sauté in two tablespoons olive oil and cook until done; set aside.

Boil the Rigatoni according to directions.

Put the cooked pasta in the pan with the sauce and stir until the sauce and Rigatoni are blended.

Place on a platter, add chicken pieces around the platter. Top with parmesan cheese.

Mayo-Free Summer Coleslaw

By SUZIE

Summer is a time for easy, healthy cold sides that can be made ahead of time.

Coleslaw doesn't have to be coated in mayo (although I love it that way, and if you use a healthy mayo there's no issue).

But imagine not liking mayo? The fact is lots of people do not!

Here is a mayo-free cole slaw loaded with healthy vegetables to keep your taste buds happy and your body healthy. You can always adjust seasonings to your liking, but here is a basic recipe.

You can use the same dressing for potatoes as well and add some dill. Enjoy!

EASY MAYO-FREE SUMMER COLESLAW

2 cups green cabbage (sliced thinly)

2 cups red cabbage (sliced thinly)

1 cup grated carrots

3-4 scallions (thinly sliced)

1 cup Italian parsley (roughly chopped)

DRESSING:

2/3 cup organic full fat(preferably grass fed) plain Greek yogurt

3 Tbsp. lemon juice

1 Tbsp. apple cider vinegar

1 Tbsp. or so raw organic honey (optional)

1 Tbsp. or so Dijon mustard

1 tsp. celery seed

1 1/2 tsp. sea salt or Herbamare seasoned salt (or more to taste)

Black pepper to taste

Mix dressing in a bowl with whisk, add to veggies and toss well.

Tastes best left in fridge for a few hours.

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty – About Working While Collecting Early Benefits

By RUSSELL GLOOR
National Social Security Advisor
at the AMAC Foundation, The Non-Profit Arm of the Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: How much would be withheld from my Social Security benefits? I am 62 and can claim about $1,900 a month now. I'm still working, making about $75K per year. How much of my benefits would I get? What would be withheld from me and when would I get it back? And would there be any penalty? Signed: Eligible but Working

Dear Eligible: In the scenario you describe, you will not be eligible to collect Social Security retirement benefits at this time because your earnings are too high. Here's how that is determined:

• At age 62, you are subject to Social Security's "earnings test" which limits how much you can earn while collecting early benefits. The earnings limit applies until you reach your full retirement age (FRA), which for you is 67.

• Your penalty for exceeding the earnings limit now would be $1 for every $2 you are over the limit. At your current salary of $75K per year, you will be over the 2022 annual earnings limit of $19,560 by $55,440, which means you would owe Social Security $27,720. Since your age 62 benefit amount is about $1,900 per month ($22,800/year), your annual SS benefit would be insufficient to offset the penalty for exceeding the earnings limit, thus you would not be entitled to a Social Security benefit because of your current earnings. You will again be eligible to collect SS when your earnings are substantially less, or when you reach your full retirement age, whichever occurs first.

Social Security's earnings test affects everyone who works and earns when collecting benefits before reaching full retirement age. Each year, Social Security sets a limit for how much can be earned before benefits are affected (the 2022 limit is $19,560; it increases slightly each year). Those who exceed the limit pay a "penalty" of $1 for every $2 they are over the limit, which must be paid to SS either in a lump sum, or by having benefits withheld for enough months for SS to recover what is owed. If your Social Security benefit isn't enough to offset the penalty for exceeding the earnings limit, no benefits will be paid.

Those collecting early benefits who earn only slightly more than the annual earnings limit can collect some benefits each year because their penalty is small enough. For example, someone earning $25,000 per year would exceed the 2022 earnings limit by $5440 and, thus, incur a penalty of $2,720. That would probably mean about 2 months of withheld benefits, enabling them to get benefits for the remaining 10 months of the year. Social Security will withhold benefits for enough months to recover whatever the beneficiary owes for exceeding the limit.

The rules surrounding Social Security's earning test are somewhat complex. For example, there is a "first year rule" which exempts salary earned prior to claiming SS from counting toward the earnings limit. When someone first claims Social Security mid-year they are, instead, subject to a monthly limit ($1630 for 2022) for the remaining months of the calendar year. If the monthly limit is exceeded, no benefits are payable for that month. The earnings limit no longer applies when full retirement age is reached but is still in effect in the months of that year prior to attaining FRA. The earnings limit during those months is much higher and the "penalty" for exceeding it is less.

Social Security prefers that those working and collecting early benefits contact them in advance to withhold benefits for as long as needed to offset the expected penalty. Doing so will avoid an Overpayment Notice being issued in the following year when your earnings amount is received from the IRS.

After full retirement age, Social Security will adjust the beneficiary's payment to account for months benefits were withheld and increase the monthly amount accordingly. That will result in some, or perhaps all, of the withheld benefits being recovered over time (depending on longevity).

Movie Review: 'Minions: The Rise Of Gru'

By BOB GARVER

I believe the opening of "Minions: The Rise of Gru" represents an important milestone. If I'm correct, this is the last movie whose trailer I saw prior to the pandemic.

I've made a ton of jokes about how many times I had to sit through the trailers for "Morbius" and "Top Gun: Maverick" before those movies opened, but unless I'm mistaken, this was the last holdout.

Was the two-year-plus wait worth it? Not really. It's not the disaster/punchline that "Morbius" was, but it isn't up to the level of a crowd-pleasing smash like "Top Gun: Maverick," either.

The new film takes place long before the "Despicable Me" movies, but after 2015's "Minions." Eleven-year-old Gru (Steve Carell, whose vaguely-Eastern-European accent is even more annoying when he adds childlike affectations) dreams of one day becoming a supervillain. Luckily there's a spot open on the legendary squad known as the Vicious 6 since they kicked out founding member Wild Knuckles (Alan Arkin) right after he procured them a powerful relic. The Vicious 6, now led by Belle Bottom (Taraji P. Henson), dismiss Gru for being too young, and he retaliates by stealing the relic for himself. He's soon abducted by Wild Knuckles, who is planning his comeback. Gru is simultaneously terrified and in awe of his favorite villain. Maybe as a side-project to the kidnapping, W.K. can mentor him on becoming a supervillain.

Of course, we can't forget about the Minions' role in all of this. Gru keeps a hoard of the happy henchman (all voiced by Pierre Coffin) in his mother's basement. Unbeknownst to any of the villains, Gru gave the relic to a bumbler named Otto, who traded it for a Pet Rock. An irate Gru fires the entire Minion army as a result, but they're loyal to a fault, and immediately organize a rescue effort when they learn their master has been abducted. Standouts Kevin, Stewart, and Bob track Gru to Wild Knuckles' hideout in San Francisco, where they become kung fu masters at the hands of Master Chow (Michelle Yeoh, my favorite cast member in this movie, even though her appeal is based on her work on "Everything Everywhere All at Once" from earlier this year). Otto works on retrieving the relic via tricycle, while the Vicious 6 track Gru and Wild Knuckles. Like a certain Jack Nicholson movie that is curiously never mentioned, the whole thing is destined to end in San Francisco's Chinatown.

The humor is exactly what you'd expect from a movie like this. The Minions live for physical comedy almost as much as they live to serve evildoers (an inexplicable morality, since they themselves don't have an evil bone in their bodies). When the movie isn't mining laughs from Minion mayhem, it mines laughs from the way they talk, which I think is mostly gibberish, though I definitely caught a few Spanish phrases in there. Whatever language it is, it's high-pitched for maximum annoyance.

The target audience for "Minions: The Rise of Gru" is obviously kids, or more specifically families with kids looking for a group activity. This means that older kids and adults will be "dragged" to see this movie. There's some stuff to like, usually involving Wild Knuckles or the Vicious 6 (my favorite member is sinister sister Nun-Chuck, by the way). But at least for me, there wasn't enough of it.

I'm sorry, but a little of Gru and the Minions goes a long way, and I can't endorse a movie whose very title contains multiple characters and not one of them doesn't grate on me.

Grade: C

"Minions: The Rise of Gru" is rated PG for some action/violence and rude humor. Its running time is 87 minutes.

BBB: Get Rich Quick Scheme Uses Deepfake Technology To Impersonate Elon Musk

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

Scammers are taking advantage of new deepfake technology to create videos so convincing that people will hand over their money. This latest con looks like business magnate Elon Musk endorsing an investment plan, but the video is fake, and the investment is a scam.

How the scam works

You come across a video of Elon Musk while scrolling through social media. Or perhaps a trusted friend sent you the video. In it, Elon Musk talks about ways to invest in cryptocurrency and how you can make a large amount of money in no time. This sounds like a get-rich-quick scheme, but the video looks so real! Musk is a famous business leader, so his advice must be credible, right?

Think again! The video is a fake. Scammers used deepfake technology to create it from existing footage of Musk. If you follow the links and "invest," you'll lose everything.

One consumer who lost all of his Bitcoin to this scam described the video he saw: "The spoofed video is an apparent live feed with many viewers and likes, and looks like a legit web broadcast... During the video, there are constant references by the participants to coin giveaways. It makes you believe that it is very real and a limited-time offer."

Also, watch out for more scams using similar deepfake videos. One victim reported to BBB Scam Tracker a similar scam targeting Canadians. In this video, Musk offered "poor families a chance to become rich in a few months" by instantly turning an initial $250 CAD deposit into $6,000 CAD.

How to spot viral video scams

• Understand how deepfake technology works. Deepfake technology takes video clips and photos of a person and uses the imagery to create new videos and audio clips.

• Know that celebrities are often impersonated. Politicians, actors, business leaders, and other celebrities are often "recreated" in deepfakes. That's because plenty of public video clips and photos of them are available. Don't assume a celebrity video is legitimate unless you can verify it came from an official source.

• Don't "act immediately." Most scams involve an element of urgency. Claims that you can get rich quickly, but only if you act now, are a red flag. Never give in to pressure to invest, wire funds, or give up your personal information to receive a gift, money, or an investment opportunity.

• Don't believe everything you see on social media. Never make financial decisions based on viral videos on social media. Before investing in something or donating to a charity, do plenty of research to ensure you do so through a legitimate channel.

"Rock Solid Security"

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE SGT. KARYN BARKAS
Public Information Officer
Quincy Police Department

On Friday, July 1, at 8 p.m., Officer Lawrence and Officer Minton were dispatched to a retail establishment on a report of a larceny. Upon arrival, officers met with a security officer and suspect inside the security office.

The individual was suspected of stealing an iPhone 13 Pro Max from the store on June 26 and attempting to steal another phone this evening. The suspect worked for a third-party contractor inside the retail establishment.

In the June 26th incident, the suspect was seen taking the cellphone out for a potential customer, who later walked away from the sale. The suspect placed the cell phone on the counter behind him. A short while later, he was seen placing a white paper towel over the box containing the phone. He attempted to place it inside his personal bag, but was distracted by another employee. Several minutes later, the cellphone was placed into his bag and he went on with his job as normal.

This evening, July 1, the suspect attempted to steal another iPhone 13 Pro Max, but was caught by security and brought to their office so Quincy Police could be contacted. Officers began to gather the appropriate information to take out formal charges against the suspect. As they were talking to him, he was sitting in a chair next to a security desk and began emptying his personal bag. His bag contained sneakers, miscellaneous clothing, and other items. Officer Minton stood the suspect up and began to pat frisk the exterior of his clothing, having him remove any objects from his pockets. These items included a black cellphone, $800 in cash, Apple Ear Pod headphones, a portable cellphone charger, and his wallet. He also had a black hoodie that was found to be empty and placed on the ground next to him.

While speaking with security officers, Officer Minton and Officer Lawrence observed the suspect pick up his hoodie, place it on his lap, and start to move around in a suspicious manner that was concealing the movement of his hands. Officer Minton said, "Hey! What are you doing? What's under your hoodie?" That was when Officer Lawrence observed what appeared to be the handle of a firearm.

Officers immediately restrained the suspect, uncovered the hoodie, and discovered a Glock 9mm firearm with a magazine inserted into the magazine well. Officer Lawrence secured the firearm while Officer Minton placed the suspect into handcuffs. Officer Lawrence removed the magazine, which contained fifteen (15) 9mm rounds, and rendered the firearm safe. Officer Lawrence demanded to see the suspect's License to Carry (LTC), but the suspect did not have one.

The 21-year-old male from Dorchester was transported to the Quincy Police Station where he was booked in the usual manner. The suspect was charged with larceny under $1,200 (cell phone), possession of firearm without an FID card (subsequent offense), illegal possession of ammunition, improperly secured firearm, and possession of a large capacity feeding device. The Glock 9mm, magazine, and 15 rounds of ammunition were placed into a handgun storage box and turned over to the custody of BCI Detective Wash for processing.

Great work!

2nd Quarter Report: Norfolk Real Estate Uptick In Sales, Sales Prices

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reports that second quarter (April-June 2022) Norfolk County real estate statistics show a continued uptick in residential and commercial sales and sale prices, despite overall numbers trending downward.

"During the recently concluded second quarter of the 2022 calendar year, the average Norfolk County real estate sales price, both residential and commercial, increased 30% to $1,300,157," O'Donnell said. "Total real estate volume, again both residential and commercial, was $4.09 billion, a 16 percent increase year over the same period in 2022."

O'Donnell said the lack of inventory and new construction continue to push prices up. "It remains to be seen if this trend continues as overall activity is slowing considerably," he added.

For the second quarter of 2022, the number of land documents recorded, (such as deeds, mortgages, homesteads, mortgage discharges, etc.) was 35,744, a 31 percent decline from the second quarter of 2021.

"This figure tells us while there is still a healthy real estate market, market conditions and rising interest rates are starting to have an impact. We are not seeing the volume we saw in 2020 and 2021," O'Donnell said.

There were 6,809 mortgages recorded at the Registry during the second quarter of the calendar year 2022 compared to 12,041 for the same time period in 2021, a 43 percent decrease. Total mortgage borrowing was $5.06 billion for April through June compared to $6.63 billion during the same period in 2021.

"With the increase in interest rates, consumers seem to be less inclined to borrow" O'Donnell said.

Norfolk County homeowners continued to benefit from the Homestead Act. A total of 3,315 declarations of homestead were recorded during the second quarter of the calendar year, a 10 percent decrease over the same period a year ago. "The Homestead law provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. I urge Norfolk County residents to consider this important consumer protection tool," O'Donnell. said

A sharp increase in foreclosure activity in Norfolk County remains a cause for concern. Sixteen foreclosure deeds were recorded in the second quarter, the same number recorded during the second quarter of 2021. However, there was a significant increase in the number of recorded Notices to Foreclose, the first step in the foreclosure process. There were 66 Notices recorded in the second quarter versus 33 recorded in the same period of 2021.

"While the eastern Massachusetts economy remains on a solid footing, there are still those in Norfolk County experiencing economic hardship, in many cases through no fault of their own," O'Donnell said.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: 'Secretary Of The Interior' – Travel-Inspired Interiors

I absolutely love my sister's décor because she has found beautiful and unique treasures from her travels and they are the special things that decorate her home. As I prepare to go on vacation soon, can you give me some ideas on what to look for to add visual interest and a fresh look to my home's interior? Lilia

What a great and timely question! As I have mentioned many times, your home's interior should tell a story. And obviously your sister's home reflects her personal experiences enjoyed traveling the world.

How do you accomplish this? Follow my three simple rules and you will be filling your suitcases with beautiful finds.

First, choose quality items: therefore, avoid the souvenir shops and their kitschy cheap products. However, there is always one exception, right? Consider purchasing some higher end, photograph-style postcards to frame or to create a shadow box or collage on a large, framed map.

Second, wander through the local flea markets, fabric stores, art galleries, craft fairs, and specialty boutiques like glass and ceramic shops to find those one-of-a-kind treasures. We all think twice about "what can fit in our suitcase" but if you find the perfect mirror, rug, light fixture or piece of art or sculpture, it's worth the shipping or extra airline handling fee. Think about spreading that cost over twenty years of enjoying something and the price seems rather affordable. Speaking of budget, skip one of those fancy hotel restaurant dinners so you can spring for that beautiful crystal vase you admired every time you walked past the shop window.

Finally, go back to the basics of interior decorating when deciding what to choose for accessories. Purchase items in colors that will go with your current interior. Either the same color family, analogous (colors next to each other on the color wheel) or complementary colors will work with what you already own. Look for something that might be a new focal point. Don't forget balance, scale, and proportion. Add interest with texture and layers. Or maybe start a collection to which you can add from future vacations.

In closing, follow the golden rule of decorating: live with what you love.

Quincy College Earns State Approval Offer 2nd Bachelor's Degree

4-Year Degree In Computer Science

Quincy College has earned approval from the Massachusetts Department of Higher Education (DHE) to offer a new four-year degree in computer science.

College officials called the approval another milestone in the college's ongoing efforts to make bachelor's degrees more accessible and affordable to students throughout the region.

The DHE approved the proposed Bachelor of Science in computer science based on several factors, including program quality, enrollment potential, student interest and local workforce need. According to the Massachusetts Economic Research Department's Long-Term Occupation Projections for baccalaureate-level, computer-based occupations, mean wages ranged from $91,470 to $121,700 with thousands of open positions in Massachusetts.

"This is an example of building on success," said Dr. Servet Yatin, Quincy College Provost and Chief Academic Officer. "After the successful launch of our Bachelor of Science in Business Management last spring, we owed it to our students and our community to expand our baccalaureate offerings into the high-demand computer science field."

Last fall, DHE gave its approval to Quincy College's request to offer a baccalaureate degree in Business Management, the first such approval ever granted to a two-year Massachusetts public college; enrollment in that program has been underway since January. Once the approval is received from the New England Commission of Higher Education (NECHE) – Quincy College's institutional accreditation agency – the College will then begin enrolling students in its second Bachelor's degree program for the semester beginning in January, 2023.

The development of a new program, particularly at the advanced baccalaureate level, requires a high level of expertise and institutional commitment.

"I want to acknowledge the work of the College faculty, led by Provost Yatin, all of whom worked tirelessly in the past year to develop a baccalaureate program in Computer Science that not only provides classroom instruction, but work experience through internships," said Quincy College President Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

"With two baccalaureate programs, the opportunities for students multiply," said Provost Yatin. "These programs of study were designed to be complementary, so students will be able to major in Computer Science and minor in Business Management, or vice versa. Graduates will stand out and have a competitive advantage in the workforce."

Approval of Quincy College's latest baccalaureate degree request comes after extensive DHE review of the College's submission which included a detailed outline of the proposed program's quality and rigor, its enrollment potential, and the College's resources and capacity to offer it. In granting approval, DHE determined that the program substantially met or exceeded its requirements which is a tribute to the effort and expertise of the College's Computer Science faculty who were largely responsible for new course development as well as modifications to existing courses in order to fully prepare students for computer and technical fields.

"Seeking approval for a baccalaureate degree is a lengthy process that requires exceptional teamwork," said Provost Yatin. "In this case, for more than two years, our dedicated Computer Science faculty brought collaboration, insight, and remarkable attention to detail in their work preparing our request for the ultimately successful DHE review and now for the NECHE review. I thank my colleagues for their commitment to Quincy College and for their belief in the importance of additional, unique educational pathways for our students to follow to achieve their goals."

Similar to the Bachelor of Science in Business Management, the Bachelor's degree in Computer Science will be open to students throughout the Commonwealth. Quincy College partnered with the National Board of Higher Education (NEBHE) to offer a pathway for qualified transfer students from Massachusetts community colleges in accordance with the Massachusetts Transfer Guarantee. The College has also executed agreements with individual colleges, including Roxbury Community College and Bristol Community College. These articulation agreements were developed at the course and program level to maximize the number of credits that transfer between institutions.

"With our second baccalaureate degree offering, Quincy College has further differentiated itself as a leader among the state's two-year colleges," DeCristofaro said. "We continue to be committed to the ideals of access and affordability, and are equally committed to making the dream of a bachelor's degree a reality for increasing numbers of students."

As part of the College's commitment to affordability, scholarships are available.

mayor said. "I don't know where he is, but he took the test and he is a veteran."

The mayor said he plans to hire "an outside person or agency to come in and take over the process." The mayor appointed Daniel Bennett, the state's former public safety secretary, to oversee the hiring process for new police officers in 2020 when his elder son, Cornelius Koch, was appointed to the department. In 2008, then-Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti led the search for a new police chief, as Keenan is the mayor's brother-in-law.

Thomas Koch Jr. is a 2017 graduate of North Quincy High School. He served four years in the United States Marine Corps, including two deployments overseas, his father said.

"He was a corporal, which is pretty good by the way, because 70 percent of marines come out a lance corporal or less. I'm proud of him," the elder Koch said.

"He wanted to serve, always talked about the marines, and my guess is that if there was some real stuff going on he probably would have stayed in, because that's the marine mentality. He stays in touch with a bunch of his buddies from around the country.

"I'm proud of him. We need people to do it. The ranks of the military depend on volunteers. There's only 25 percent of the population that are eligible and, in the end, only 1 percent serve, so it's important."

In addition to the potential new firefighters, the mayor said the city's fire department will be adding a fourth ladder track to its fleet sometime in the months ahead. The mayor said Fire Chief Joseph Jackson would be responsible for determining where that new truck will go and whether all four ladders are in service full-time.

"That's what we're discussing," Koch responded when asked if all four ladders would be in service around the clock.

"We've got one in Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy right now. There may be a shifting around of other apparatus. I know he's looking at it, studying it now. Does the ladder truck go to West Quincy? Does the rescue truck get moved out of headquarters, somewhere else that's more centrally located?

"There will be additional apparatus and additional manpower serving the city as a whole," Koch added. "The question is how it all shakes out. That will be his call."

Senate Passes Early Childhood Care, Education Bill

On July 7, the Massachusetts Senate passed comprehensive legislation to lower costs for early childhood care and education.

The bill the Senate approved included language from a trio of amendments filed by state Sen. John Keenan to ensure proper oversight and representation on appointed boards tasked with educator workforce development and workplace childcare benefits.

"The Senate's early childhood care and education bill seeks to ensure that Massachusetts children will get the supports they need that their families can afford," said Sen. Keenan. "This legislation represents a vital investment in our Commonwealth's future."

With S.2971, An Act to expand access to high-quality, affordable early education and care, the Commonwealth will lower expenses that families are typically responsible for while also investing more in existing education infrastructure. Under this bill, more Massachusetts residents who fall into the middle-income bracket will be eligible for childcare subsidies, increasing the qualifying threshold from 50% of state median income to 125%. This bill also invests additional funding in the Commonwealth's public education system by raising the salaries of early education professionals.

The bill as passed included language filed by Sen. Keenan, initially as two separate amendments, that dealt with the newly established advisory council tasked with overseeing workforce development for educators. Sen. Keenan's amendments added three current educators as members, including one early career educator, and required that a new commission responsible for offering recommendations on employer-supported childcare benefits include one member whose current employer does not offer such benefits. A third amendment filed by Sen. Keenan sought to grant Quincy College students access to scholarships established in the legislation. This language was incorporated into the bill when consolidated with an amendment filed by Senator Michael O. Moore of Worcester.

"I believe that as we work to bolster the development of our childcare workforce, those who work in the field should have the opportunity to provide their valuable input based on their experiences," said Sen Keenan.

"In addition to investing in our youngest learners and their families, we also need to maintain a well-trained workforce of educational professionals who are paid well enough to remain in their chosen field," said Sen. Keenan.

As the next step in the legislative process, the Senate bill will now go to the House of Representatives for further action.

of Staff, who will chair the new foundation; former US Rep. William Delahunt; and Katherine Craven, the chair of the Massachusetts Board of Elementary and Secondary Education.

Tuesday's announcement was made inside the Adams Academy on Adams Street, home of the Quincy Historical Society. The new presidential center will be located on a parcel of land adjacent to the academy site, Koch told reporters following the announcement, and may also extend over the MBTA tracks to Freedom Park on Burgin Parkway. Koch expects the building to include a minimum of 100,000 square feet of space.

The mayor said he hopes to break ground on the new building in 2025, which is the 400th anniversary of Quincy's settlement. There is no timeline for when the facility will open.

There is no price tag for the new facility yet either, Koch said, adding that the cost would be "significant." The mayor said the funds for the project would be privately raised – with the possibility of receiving state or federal monies as well– but noted the city could use hotel tax funds for it if necessary.

In announcing plans for the new Adams Presidential Center, Koch said it would differ from the traditional presidential libraries seen across the United States. Instead, he said it would serve as a place for public engagement.

"There are a number of presidential libraries across the country dedicated to the various presidents over time. In many cases libraries are depositories for presidents' paperwork, documents, books, et cetera. Well, we don't have that, nor do we need that here for what we're contemplating for the Adams Presidential Center," Koch said.

"We're in the early stages, but we view it more as a place of engagement, civic engagement. A place to really get some educational experience about the history of our country, but really about contribution of public service made by the Adamses and hopefully to inspire generations – that with citizenship comes responsibility."

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH (at podium) announces the formation of a new foundation that will raise funds for an Adams Presidential Center. Looking on are former Cong. William Delahunt (far left), a member of the new foundation, and retired Gen. Joseph Dunford who will chair the foundation. The announcement was made at a press conference Tuesday morning at the Adams Academy. The Adams Presidential Center would be built next to the Adams Academy (photo below). "We're in the early stages, but we view it more as a place of civic engagement. A place to really get some educational experience about the history of our country, but really about contribution of public service made by the Adamses and hopefully to inspire generations – that with citizenship comes responsibility," the mayor said of the planned Adams Presidential Center. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

The new non-profit organization will help set the course for the new facility, Koch explained.

"We have created a foundation, a non-profit foundation, with three charter members and will build from that," he said. "The foundation's role is going to be to raise significant private monies to help build this facility and to oversee the design and construction of this facility as well."

The original three board members will be tasked with finding additional people to serve alongside them on the board, Koch said, and the board could have between 15 and 21 members. The city will likely have a representative on the board.

"There will definitely be a connection between the city and the foundation," Koch told reporters. "We're still trying to figure out that relationship and legally how best it works."

Two private firms, M. Goodwin Museum Planning and Luci Creative, were also brought on to assist with the planning effort for the new presidential center, Koch said. The city is using $50,000 in American Rescue Act Plan funds to retain their services.

During his announcement, the mayor noted he has asked the Boston Public Library to return John Adams' personal book collection to Quincy – Koch credited his predecessor, KATHERINE CRAVEN, the chair of the Massachusetts Board of Elementary and Secondary Education, will also serve on the Adams Presidential Center Foundation. She said the new foundation could support an alumni network for recipients of the state's John and Abigail Adams scholarship.

BROOKS AMES, a descendant of the Adams family and the secretary of the Adams Memorial Society, welcomed Tuesday's news. "We are pleased the city is honoring the legacy of John, John Quincy, Abigail and Louisa Catherine and protecting and preserving that legacy," he said.

QHS Fashion Students Hit Runway At 'Giving The Glam'

Three dozen Quincy High School fashion students recently participated in the Giving the Glam fundraising event.

The fashion show took place in Dover, MA, and the Giving the Glam showroom is in Norwood. Models had hair and make-up done by professionals. The QHS contingent then travelled to the venue in Dover where the models got dressed and walked an outdoor runway.

Quincy High School had some special guests in attendance at this year's fashion show held in May. Marestela Rapo and her team from Giving the Glam, as well as a local designer and former Ms. Massachusetts were in the audience.

Giving the Glam is a non-profit organization in Massachusetts that helps homeless and low income students go to prom. Each year, Giving the Glam organizers select schools to work with. Leslie Brisdon, QHS's homeless coodinator/foster care contact reached out to Giving the Glam.

After attending the Quincy High School student fashion show, Marestela and her team were so impressed that she asked 12 designers to participate in her gala event on June 18th. Featured were student models wearing 23 garments.

The fashion show at the Gala was a success and QHS has been invited back next year to participate again. The school is hoping to build a strong relationship with Marestela Rapo and her team.

QHS student models who participated in "Giving the Glam" were:

Jacob Lustig, Rebecca Smith, Lillian Nguyen, Zhaiya Leggett, Maddie O'Hara Kelly, Celia Cronin, Mollie Smith-Gaeta, Aislynn Johnson, Mariejo Ajavon, Bridgett Rohana, Bobby Donovan, Lola Pagnani, Kayleigh Caldwell, Megan Caldwell, Jimmy Phipps, Adam Manter, Izzy Guerreiro, Lydia Li, Amari Blair, Christina Lacroix, Alex Monteiro, Shane Cunniff and Beth Chetwynd.

Student designers participating in "Giving the Glam" were:

Mallory Carlson, Rebecca Smith, Henry Tang, Zhaiya Leggett, Sam Conley, Kimi Vallee, Grace Cunniff, Kat Shaughnessy, Abby Yanovitch, Sorcha Quinn, Shelagh Holler, Leah Forte, Emily Huang, Laila Mullgrave and Beth Chetwynd.

BBB Tip: Beware Scholarship Scams When Searching For Financial Aid

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

As the June 30 federal FAFSA deadline passed, many students are searching and applying for grants and scholarships to fund their college education. With an average tuition of approximately $22,000 at 4-year institutions, according to the National Center for Education Statistics, paying for a college degree is a challenging obstacle for prospective students. A challenge that is made more difficult by the presence of scammers looking to take advantage of students and parents searching for financial aid opportunities.

The Better Business Bureau receives numerous reports of scholarship scams every year. Multiple reports have already been submitted to BBB Scam Tracker in 2022, detailing consumer interactions with unethical businesses claiming to provide students financial guidance.

For students struggling to pay tuition, a sudden offer of a grant or scholarship can look like a dream come true. But it could be bait for a scam. This con hooks victims with the promise of money, but upfront "fees" never actually materialize into those much-needed funds. In a more recent twist, these scammers claim to help with student loan forgiveness.

Better Business Bureau (BBB) recommends caution when dealing with companies that offer assistance in finding financial aid opportunities. Students and their families should be wary of websites, seminars, or other schemes that promise to find scholarships, grants, or financial aid packages for a fee.

How the scams work:

Scammers typically claim to represent the government, a university, or a nonprofit organization. The details vary, but the con is the same. The scammer will pose as a financial aid representative using words like "National" and "Federal" to sound more official. They claim you have won a scholarship or a grant (without ever applying) and ask for payment of a one-time "processing fee." In another version, the scammer pressures you into applying for a "guaranteed" scholarship or grant. However, there is a fee to apply. Once the fee is paid, time goes by, and the money is never sent. When attempting to contact a representative, it is quickly discovered that the company has set so many conditions that it is almost impossible to receive a refund.

In yet another variation, a check arrives for the scholarship and instructions are included to send back payment for taxes or fees. The check turns out to be a fake, and you're out whatever money was sent.

A consumer reported this version recently: "The business claims to have been around for 14 years, but the website has been up for two... The financial aid workshops are a pitch meeting where they try to get you to pay $2,000 for help with college admissions, but it turns out that help is limited to exchanging text messages with an unknown person. The contract's fine print states that the person you are texting is not a professional and has no expertise in college admissions or financial aid."

Due to the sensitive personal and financial information provided for scholarship and grant applications, it is important to be cautious when choosing one to apply for. Of the 2.47 million full-time students enrolled in post-secondary institutions during the 2018-19 school year, 84% were awarded financial aid through student loans or federal, state, local or institutional grants. On average, students were awarded slightly over $5,000 from federal grants, such as FAFSA, and more than $11,000 from institutional grants. While the amount awarded varies depending on the institution (public versus private or two-year versus four-year), applying for grants and scholarships is a great way to help ease the financial burden of attending college.

Legitimate companies are helping students find aid with some results. However, students and parents can usually find the same awards and others on their own by searching online. Prospective college financial aid offices can help as well, especially if it is a college the student is seriously considering attending.

It is generally free to apply for scholarships.

In the U.S., more information is available online at studentaid.gov for the different financial aid options. Even if you don't think you qualify for financial aid, review the options on the Federal Student Aid website, as many colleges and universities use it for non-need-based awards.

To protect students and parents searching for financial aid opportunities from falling victim to scholarship scams, the Better Business Bureau recommends following these guidelines:

• Beware of unsolicited offers. Typically, winning a scholarship or grant that wasn't applied for is impossible. Ask how the organization got your name and contact information, and then verify it with the source outside of the email, phone number or website they used to contact you.

84th Annual Quincy Bay Race Week Regatta Begins July 28

The Quincy Bay Race Week Association announces the 84th Annual Regatta will commence on July 28th and 29th hosted by Wessagussett Yacht Club, July 30th hosted by Squantum Yacht Club and July 31st hosted by Wollaston Yacht Club.

Quincy Bay Race Week Association was born from an idea of creating a week of racing off the waters of Quincy and Weymouth to supplement the racing schedule found on the Northern coastline of Massachusetts. In the winter of 1937-1938 members of the Quincy Bay Yacht Clubs got together and organized the "Quincy Bay Race Week Association."

Today, Quincy Bay Race Week Association is made up of the eight member yachts clubs which include Metropolitan YC, Squantum YC, Wollaston YC, Quincy YC, Town River YC, Braintree YC, Wessagussett YC and South Shore YC. Quincy Bay Race Week Association includes partnerships and collaborations with many local businesses along with the leadership of the City of Quincy and the Towns of Weymouth and Braintree.

Over its 84 years, Race Week activities and events included the racing, a boat parade and even a beauty pageant. The events have evolved into the present-day Quincy Bay Race Week Association activities of racing on our Inside Line for the children (juniors) and the Outside Line racing for the adults. Nothing has endured and been more meaningful than the junior events. All participants are filled with the passion and the joy that comes from being involved in this historic sailing competition requiring skill, knowledge, and enthusiasm.

The mission of the Quincy Bay Race Week Association is to promote sailing excellence for both the novice and the experienced through competition. More importantly, Quincy Bay Race Week provides a fun, safe, sail racing forum for the youth of Quincy and Hingham Bay and beyond. Not alone in its mission of racing, the Quincy Bay Race Week Association also promotes camaraderie and brotherhood between its eight-member yacht clubs.

Quincy Bay Race Week Association is a non-profit organization. Due to the leadership and the Association's fiscal management, Quincy Bay Race Week Association is proud to be able to provide four scholarships to any post high school student of a related member of any yacht club within the eight member clubs.

This year's Race Week will be dedicated to three major supporters of the Quincy Bay Race Week Association who have passed away during the last year. Lou Gainor, PC Metropolitan Yacht Club, who was known as Capt. Lou on his weekly Nautical Talk Radio, was a constant champion of Race Week and was a devoted promoter of the Junior racing. Weymouth Harbormaster, Paul Malone was our guardian on the water during Race Week. Paul always promoted boating safety and QBRW Past President, Henry Lamb, PC from Squantum Yacht Club was the quiet behind the scenes visionary leader who embodied the spirit of Race Week through his selfless support of the Scholarships.

For more information regarding this year's event, contact Publicity Chairman Paul Lewis at 617-999-7289.

Beware Scholarship Scams When Searching For Financial Aid

• Take your time. Avoid being rushed or pushed into paying for help at a seminar. Use caution if a representative urges you to buy now to avoid losing an opportunity.

• Ask lots of questions. Be cautious if a company is reluctant to answer questions about the service or the process. If the company or seminar representative is evasive, walk away.

• Ask your guidance counselor or a college financial aid office whether they have experience with the company.

• Be skeptical of glowing success stories touted on websites or at seminars. Ask instead for the names of families in your community who have used the service in the last year. Talk to them and find out about their experience with the firm.

• Ask about fees associated with a professional financial aid search and find out if the company provides refunds. Get the information in writing, but realize the dishonest companies may refuse to give refunds despite stated policies.

• Be aware that a check can bounce even after the bank allows cash withdrawal from the deposit. Check processing is a confusing business, as is the terminology. Even if a bank representative says that a check has "cleared," it is not certain that it won't be detected as a fake weeks later. One thing the account holder can be sure of is that they will be responsible for any funds drawn against the amount.

THE MIRACLE PRAYER
Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past, I have asked for many favors.
This time, I ask you this very special favor (mention favor). Take it dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within your own broken heart where your father sees it. Then in his merciful eyes it will become your favor, not mine.
Amen.
Say this prayer for 3 days, promise publication and favor will be granted, no matter how impossible. Never known to fail. E.K. 7/21

She taught grades 3-10 at St. Ambrose in Dorchester, St. Mary's in Charlestown, Our Lady of Grace in Chelsea, St. Theresa of Avila in West Roxbury, Cardinal Spellman High School in Brockton, and Fontbonne Academy in Milton. She taught English, History, and Latin. She spent four summers in Framingham at the Novitiate where she worked with the young novices, many of whom have remained lifelong friends. She was appointed Dean of Students at Regis College in 1964 and served in that position until 1974. She then studied at Babson College where she worked toward a Business Degree in Administration. Peg left the Congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph in 1975 and joined the Girl Scouts of the USA where she worked as a Management Consultant based in Boston until 1978. Her love for education brought her back to the Board of Regents for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts where she worked from 1978-1982. Her final career move was as the Dean of Students at Massasoit Community College after which she retired in 1995.

Peg loved Cape Cod and she loved to travel. She travelled all over Europe but the river cruises in France and Germany were her favorites. She spent winters in Aruba and St. Maarten and enjoyed getting together with all of the friends she met there over the years. She loved the beach!

Peg was a member of St. Pius X Church, South Yarmouth, where she attended daily Mass prior to COVID. Her church friends were special to her, and she enjoyed their morning chats before and after Mass. Since COVID, she enjoyed watching daily Mass on TV. Peg loved her family, and she loved her friends of which she had many. If you knew Peg, you loved her, and she loved you. She made everyone feel so very special!

Beloved daughter of the late James P. and Leona L. (O'Brien) Donovan.

One of six siblings, she was the devoted sister of Leona D. Magnarelli of Hingham and Martha's Vineyard, and was predeceased by James P. Donovan, Elizabeth J. Pare, C. Maureen Duane, and Joseph L. Donovan.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're not Sheepish when it comes to asserting your opinions on what you think is right or wrong. Be assured that you're being heard, and something positive will follow.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your sense of justice makes it difficult not to speak up about a recurring matter involving a co-worker. But, once again, you need facts to back you up before you can act.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Romance is still dominant, and if Cupid misfired before, don't worry. He'll take better aim at someone new this time around. Expect favorable news about a financial matter.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The zodiac's Moon Children can expect things to work out pretty much as planned. One negative note involves a minor relationship problem that suddenly turns serious.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're suddenly being asked to make choices between two practically equal offers. Which one to choose? Easy. The one most likely to gladden your Lion's heart.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Once again, you're confronted by a workplace problem you thought you'd already resolved. This time, you might need to go higher up to find a just resolution.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Good for you: You're determined to stick with your goals and ignore those naysayers who might try to discourage you. You're on the right track. The challenge now is to stay on it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You'll soon get news that is supposed to help you with a troublesome situation. Use your sharp Scorpion instincts to determine if the information is reliable.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) If you learn someone has betrayed your trust, don't just accept it and walk away. You need to know why that person decided to do what he or she did.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A painful family relationship problem could finally begin to heal. Be prepared to show more flexibility than you might like. It could be worth it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good idea to enhance your career skills so you'll be prepared to accept a more responsible position when it's offered. A friend returns a favor just when you need it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Show that strong, steely backbone that you usually hide and demand to be included in any family decision-making that could affect the well-being of a loved one.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD – Is Brad Pitt breaking it to us gently that he plans to retire soon? Pitt told GQ Magazine, "I consider myself on my last leg. This last semester, or trimester, what is this section going to be?" At 58, he's won an Oscar, appeared in 60 films and produced 43 films. The $83 million "Bullet Train," in which he stars with Sandra Bullock, drops Aug. 5. He was a producer on "Blonde," the controversial biographical fictionalized drama with Ana de Armas about Marilyn Monroe's life (out Sept. 23), co-starring Adrien Brody as Arthur Miller, Bobby Cannavale as Joe DiMaggio and Caspar Phillipson as John F. Kennedy – as well as "Women Talking," with co-producers Jeremy Kleiner and Dede Gardner (who each won Oscars for "12 Years A Slave" and "Moonlight") and four-time Oscar-winner Frances McDormand, starring "The Crown's" Claire Foy, McDormand, Rooney Mara, Ben Whishaw and Judith Ivey. The women talking are Mennonites who were drugged and assaulted for two years by the men of their colony.

Pitt makes his return to acting Christmas Day in "Babylon," by Oscar-winning "La La Land" director Damien Chazelle, reuniting Pitt with his "Once Upon a Time in Hollywood" co-star Margot Robbie, in addition to Tobey Maguire, who is also a producer. "Babylon" focuses on how movies evolved from silent films to talkies. Pitt's "Once Upon a Time in Hollywood" director Quentin Tarantino offered, "He's one of the last remaining big-screen movie stars like Paul Newman, Robert Redford and Steve McQueen were, just a different breed of man." At 58, Brad Pitt can do anything he wants, so why retire? Brad, you've still got a lot of great movie roles left in you!

Adrian Grenier, who is only 45, has already thrown in the towel. The star of such films as "The Devil Wears Prada" (2006), "Entourage" (the TV series from 2004-2011), the "Entourage" film (2015), as well as The Hallmark movie "Christmas at Graceland: Home for the Holidays" (2019), left Hollywood (actually New York) and moved to Austin, Texas, admitting: "If you work hard, you can become famous. Then you make a lot of money...but it was lackluster at the top. The work I used to do got created over time; you make something, but you don't ever know if it'll be good." He added: "It's a mask-wearing process. You're not even you, you're just playing!" He gave up acting and bought a homestead with his acting money five years ago and moved in with his girlfriend, Jordan. Over the past five years, he received his permaculture certification, and hopes he can now turn his farm into a wildlife sanctuary. Where's his "Entourage" when he needs farmhands desperately?

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Spatter Ware – It is not easy to identify antique and vintage ceramics, because many were made by small local potteries and not marked. Workmen often moved to another factory but continued to make the same type of wares and decoration.

Spatter ware is a pottery decorated with paint that is actually spattered on the plate by flicking a stick dipped in the paint. Very similar decorations were made by dabbing paint on with a sponge. Many collectors think spatter and sponge are the same, so you must check any written descriptions. Both are popular vintage collectibles.

Both types of folk pottery were made in the early 1800s in Scotland, Italy, Holland, France and the United States. Similar dinnerware and other household dishes are still being made but with the help of machines, not often by hand.

Tulips are often pictured either as part of a border or as a single flower in the center. Price is determined by the condition and the skill of the decorator.

Conestoga Auction Co. sold a collection of this type of pottery, with many early examples selling for hundreds of dollars. A plate with a border of green and blue spatter stripes and a center with two stylized tulips did not have a maker,Äôs mark and sold for $224.

Q: After my mother died, we found a Pairpoint lamp in a box in the attic. It looks original except for the cord. There are two stamps under the shade dated July 9, 1901. It has puffy butterflies. The base has a diamond-shaped stamp underneath. Can you tell me what this might be worth?

A: Thomas J. Pairpoint founded the Pairpoint Manufacturing Company in New Bedford, Massachusetts, in 1880. The company joined with nearby glassworks and made glass, lamps and silver-plated pieces. Reverse-painted glass shades and molded shades known as "puffies" were made until the 1930s. The company became the Pairpoint Glass Company in 1957. It moved to Sagamore, Massachusetts, in 1970 and now makes luxury glass items. Look closely at the patent date on your lamp. Are you sure it's not 1907? Pairpoint's Papillon (butterfly) boudoir lamp marked "patented July 9th — 1907" sells at auction for about $2,000.

Strange BUT TRUE

• A duel between three people is called a truel.

• Ever chastised yourself for accidentally recording over your favorite cassette tape? Even NASA's been guilty of that one. The tapes containing the original footage of the Apollo 11 moonwalk were likely erased and reused to record satellite data.

• Prior to the invention of the eraser, you could use a rolled up piece of white bread (sans crusts) to remove pencil marks.

• Japanese sumo wrestlers are bound by strict rules even when out of the ring, governing when they sleep and eat, and how they dress and speak in public. They are not allowed to drive cars and, if they're in the lower ranks of the sport, cannot have a phone or a girlfriend.

• Anatidaephobia is the fear that somewhere in the world, a duck or goose is watching you.

• Who hasn't wished on occasion for more hours in their day? Well, if you can wait a mere 140 million years, the average Earth day could be 25 hours long, as the planet is slowly – very slowly! – decelerating.

• In 2008, a 13-year-old boy was arrested for farting too much in school. The sheriff's office claimed he "continually disrupted his classroom environment" with intentional flatulence.

• Beauty masks in ancient Rome had one heck of an ingredients list, including placenta, excrement, sulfur, sheep's wool sweat, animal urine, ground oyster shells and bile.

• Mushrooms emit electrical signals to each other containing patterns similar to human speech.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

• Got lots of fresh herbs from your summer garden? Hang bunches upside down in a cool place for a week or so. Crumble the leaves into small jars. You've made your own dried herbs.

• "Want super-crunchy fries at home? Soak potato pieces in very cold water for an hour (fridge is best, or add ice often); dry and fry. Drain fries well, dust LIGHTLY with flour and quick-fry one more time for only a minute or so." – T.C. in Idaho

• If you want to cool your canned drinks quickly, add water to the cooler with a lot of ice, submerge all drinks under the ice line, and wait about 20 minutes. Without the water, it takes much longer. The water extends the surface contact of the ice.

• To keep your ladder from sinking into soft sand or dirt, put each leg into a can or bucket. It creates a much larger surface area, thereby stabilizing the legs.

• If you run out of bleach, add 4 tablespoons of hydrogen peroxide to a small load of white laundry.

• Be certain to use only distilled water in your iron. The water from the tap can leave mineral stains on clothing, and will kill your iron if you do it all the time. – R.E. in Louisiana

Q: Is the new "Magnum P.I." returning this fall? If so, when will it premiere? I really enjoyed the first few seasons. – B.D.

A: After its surprise cancellation by CBS in May, "Magnum P.I." was picked up by competing network NBC for future episodes. According to Deadline.com, ratings weren't the issue. It's always been a top 25 show in terms of total viewers, so it was shocking that it got the ax.

Fortunately, NBC stepped in, and the cast is reportedly finalizing deals to return. Jay Hernandez, who plays the titular role, posted a video on Twitter thanking the show's persistent fans for getting petitions going. "You got a billboard in Times Square, and because of all that noise you made, we now have a new home at NBC," Hernandez expressed.

NBC has picked up the show for at least two more seasons, 10 episodes each. The network hasn't announced a premiere date yet, but hopefully, fans won't have to wait much longer to see what happened after Magnum and Higgins (Perdita Weeks) confessed their feelings for each other in the season finale.

Q: Is it true that the sitcom "Frasier" is returning? I don't think it will be the same now that John Mahoney has passed. – M.E.

A: Yes, star Kelsey Grammer recently confirmed on "The Talk" that a "Frasier" revival is in the works and that he hopes to begin filming this fall. The real-life death of John Mahoney, who played Frasier's loveable, cranky dad in the original series, will be addressed in the first episode.

Q: In the new "Top Gun" sequel, Jennifer Connelly plays a character named Penny. It's mentioned she had a prior relationship with Tom Cruise's character in the original movie, but I don't remember Connelly being in it at all. Also, why did they not mention his original love interest played by Kelly McGillis? – T.B.

A: Penny Benjamin, otherwise known as "the admiral's daughter," was mentioned but never seen in the original "Top Gun" blockbuster film. It occurred in a scene where Maverick (Tom Cruise) was being scolded by his commander for "a history of high-speed passes over five air control towers and one admiral's daughter." Goose (Anthony Edwards) then turns toward his friend and whispers, "Penny Benjamin?"

When it came time to cast a love interest in the new sequel, "Top Gun: Maverick," Kelly McGillis wasn't approached. According to Insider.com, director Joseph Kosinski explained that he "didn't want every storyline to always be looking backwards. It was important to introduce some new characters." McGillis, who is 64 years old, told "Entertainment Tonight" that she's "old" and looks "age-appropriate... and that is not what that whole scene is about."

I do agree that some sort of closure for McGillis' character would have been nice for fans of the original movie. Another missing face was Meg Ryan, who played Goose's wife. She, too, did not appear in "Maverick," but an explanation for her absence was incorporated into the dialogue.

Snooping Out a Mystery Pooper

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: Recently, a new neighbor with a big dog moved into one of the apartments next door. Since then, every morning there's a fresh deposit of dog poo on my front lawn. And not on the edge – right in the middle of the lawn. Because it happens before sunrise each day, I suspect the new neighbor is letting their dog out, unleashed and unsupervised, to do its business wherever it pleases. How should I deal with this problem? I don't have clear proof that it's the new neighbor, but it sure smells like it. – Disgusted in Dallas

Dear Disgusted: I'm with you. Owners need to be responsible for their pets, and they need to be good neighbors by keeping their dogs on a leash and picking up after them.

There are a couple of ways to discover the culprit. The low-cost way is to wake up well before dawn and watch your front lawn. Snap a photo of the dog when it comes onto your property, but don't try to shoo it away – you're gathering evidence. The high-cost way is to install a security camera with a motion sensor. Aim it so that it has a good view of your property but not other yards (it's a privacy issue). Set it to record when the motion sensor is triggered.

With or without proof, contact the property manager of the apartment building. Calmly explain the situation and your suspicions, and ask them to remind residents in writing about leash laws. Most property managers have a vested interest in keeping the neighbors happy and will cooperate to solve the problem.

AAA: Gasoline Prics Down 11 Cents

Massachusetts's average gas price is down 11 cents from last week ($4.85), averaging $4.74 per gallon, according to AAA.

Monday's price is 30 cents lower than a month ago ($5.04), and $1.72 higher than July 11, 2021 ($3.02). Massachusetts's average gas price is 7 cents higher than the national average.

The decrease in the average for a gallon of gas occurred despite a slight rise in demand, likely due to robust July 4th holiday automobile travel. AAA forecasted that 42 million people would hit the roads for the holiday weekend, a new record.

"Usually, more people buying gas would lead to higher pump prices," said Mary Maguire, AAA Northeast director of Public and Government Affairs. "But the price for oil, the main ingredient in gasoline, has fallen and is hovering around $100 a barrel. Less expensive oil usually means less expensive gas."

AAA Northeast's July 11 survey of fuel prices found the current national average to be 13 cents lower than last week ($4.80), averaging $4.67 a gallon. Today's national average price is 33 cents lower than a month ago ($5.00), and $1.53 higher than this day last year ($3.14).

Foundation Formed For Adams Presidential Center

William Phelan, for giving him the idea to do so – but said the plans for the new center are not reliant on getting that collection back.

"We are pursuing that, but this project is not contigent on having those books," Koch said. "I think it would be a nice thing to have them, but this is really about establishing a place to create some incredible opportunities, civic engagement, to continue to tell the story about the Adamses and their contributions, but also the story of America – where we've come, where we're going."

Koch first wrote to Boston officials about John Adams' book collection in 2020. Following Tuesday's announcement, Koch said his administration has not followed up since Boston officials rebuffed that request. The mayor said he is prepared to sue Boston, if necessary, to get the collection back.

"We win the moral argument. The question is going to be logistically how that transfer happens," Koch told reporters. "I don't see how we would lose in court on that issue when John Adams very specifically had in his will that he's leaving them to the inhabitants of Quincy."

Dunford, the retired chairman of the Joint Chiefs, said it was an easy decision when Koch asked him to chair the new foundation.

"When the mayor asked me to be a part of the new non-profit foundation for the Adams Presidential Center, I immediately said yes. It was an easy decision for me because I'm very proud of my Quincy roots and I saw this as an opportunity to give back to my community in a very meaningful way," Dunford said.

"I'm also enthusiastic about being part of an initiative that will celebrate the freedoms we enjoy as Americans while reminding us of our responsibilities as citizens. It seems particularly timely for us to go back to the Adams family right now as we grapple with the challenges of the 21st century."

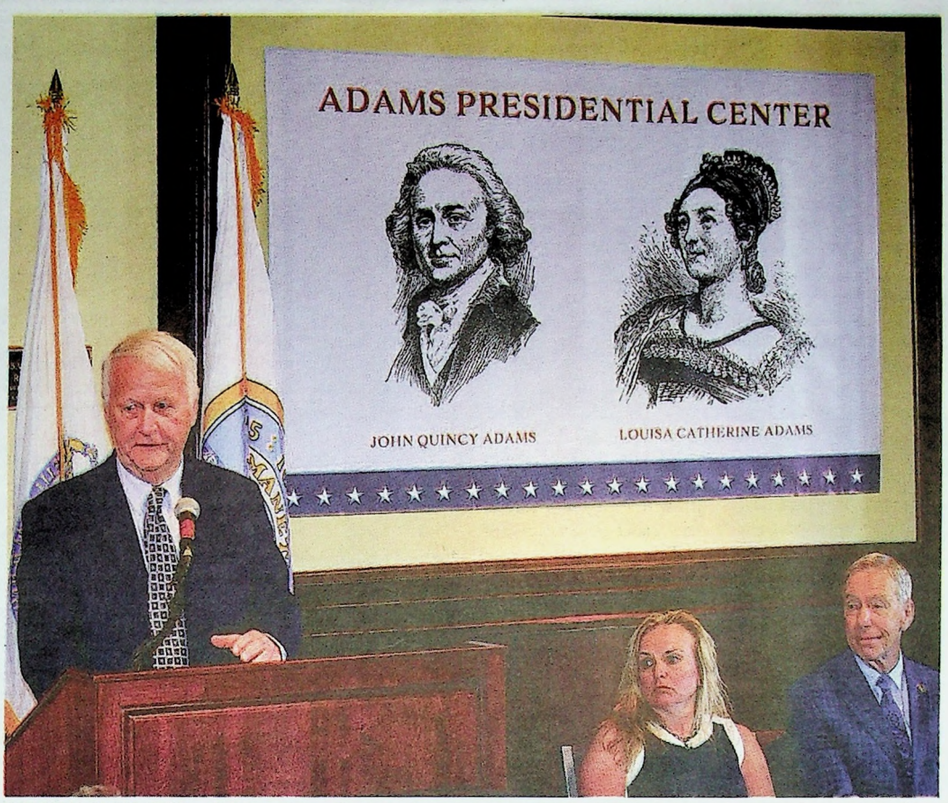
The new Adams Presidential Center will be a dynamic facility where the history of its namesakes comes to life, the retired four-star general added.

"The Adams Presidential Center will preserve the history of a truly great American family, promote the concepts of citizenship and selfless public service embodied by John, John Quincy, Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams, and inspire visitors to be engaged citizens in the service of their communities and their nation," Dunford said.

"This is really not just about preserving history – it's about inspiring people to do things in their communities today. It's certainly appropriate that the City of Presidents be the central location for educating the public about the contributions of the Adams family, and we envision the center to be a dynamic institution where the history of the Adams family literally comes to life."

Craven, who was also formerly the executive director of the Massachusetts School Building Authority, noted John Adams was a strong proponent of education. She said the new foundation could support an alumni network for recipients of the state's John and Abigail Adams scholarship.

"One of the things that came out of ed. reform is the John and Abigail Adams scholarships. Out of curiosity, a lot of people I've talked have said, 'jeez, I was a recipient of that great scholarship,' but they don't have a home," Craven said.



FORMER CONG. William Delahunt (at podium) speaks at a press conference Tuesday at the Adams Academy announcing a new non-profit foundation that will oversee the creation of an Adams Presidential Center that will honor the legacies of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and First Ladies Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams. Delahunt is one of the first three members of the foundation. Looking on is fellow Foundation member Katherine Craven and Cong. Stephen Lynch.

"One of the ideals I think of this foundation will be to cohortize and create sort of an alumni network of the thousands of students that have received these merit-based scholarships over the past 25 years."

Delahunt, the former congressman, said civics and history have seemingly taken second billing to math and science in the classroom.

"We're at a time where it would appear to me – and I'm not a professional educator – that we have an appropriate focus on sciences and math but somehow what has been relegated is civics and history. It's needed now more than ever – it's needed now more than ever – and I'm confident that we could play a key role…in not only assuring that our democracy survives but actually prospers," Delahunt said.

"And what better place to do it from here, from the City of Presidents, where in many respects it all began."

Also present on Tuesday was US Rep. Stephen Lynch, who said looking to the past can raise one's expectations for oneself.

"History and remembering and honoring our history is also a way of reaching back, reaching back in time to borrow the powerful example of our predecessors and their humanity and their imperfections, yet recognizing the incredible accomplishments that they have made," Lynch said.

"By doing so, by remembering, I think in a way we raise our own expectations for ourselves and that legacy, those high standards, are maintained."

William Galvin, the secretary of the commonwealth, said the new presidential center would help tell the story of Quincy and the Adams family to the wider world.

"I've always felt – although I am a Bostonian, as many of you know – that Quincy has been out of sight because we have all these tourists…and they all come into Massachusetts rightfully in search of history and they find their way to all the Boston sites but they never get to Quincy when so much history is right here in Quincy," Galvin said.

Catherine Allgor, the president of the Massachusetts Historical Society, congratulated Koch and the city of Quincy for "bringing the gift of history and the Adams family to Massachusetts, the nation and the world."

Brooks Ames, a descendant of the Adams family and the secretary of the Adams Memorial Society, welcomed Tuesday's news.

"We are pleased the city is honoring the legacy of John, John Quincy, Abigail and Louisa Catherine and protecting and preserving that legacy," he said.

'Vanity Awards' Ask For A Fee To Claim A Prize; Business Leaders Targeted

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

It's always an ego boost to receive a notice that you or your company has won an award. The Better Business Bureau reminds you that if that award requires you to pay a fee to "claim" it, make sure you check out all the details before sending money.

While there are many legitimate and competitive awards out there (even ones that are unfamiliar to you), there are also a lot of "vanity awards." These are available in virtually every industry and for every profession. For some, you fill out a form and pay a fee to enter the 'competition.' With others, you are notified that you've won and directed to a place where you can order plaques or trophies. These awards may sound good, but many are not particularly prestigious. The more winners there are, the less respected the award becomes.

Trusted, hardworking businesses and business owners deserve recognition, but not the kind you have to pay for. However, this is the premise of vanity award scams.

What Is A Vanity Award Scheme?

This scheme typically targets business owners through email campaigns. The email will congratulate the owner on his or her selection for the Best of [insert city name] Award and invite the contact to follow a link to a website listing further details on how to claim the prize.

Among the instructions on how to claim the honor and receive a plaque or trophy, a one-time fee will be listed, ranging from $100 to $200, sometimes with higher amounts if the owner would like a larger trophy or plaque.

BBB recommends the following tips before paying to receive an award:

- Research the award. Check out the company's BBB Business Profile at BBB.org to ensure that the offer is legitimate.
- Ask specific questions. Learn everything you can about who is giving the award, where they are located, how long the award has been in existence and how your business was selected as a winner. Organizations that offer legitimate awards will be willing to provide specific details on why your company was chosen.
- Know the nomination process. Find out who nominated your business for the award. If you didn't apply for it or the organization cannot tell you how you were nominated, chances are the award is not legitimate.
- Check for payment requirements. Most legitimate awards do not come with costs to the recipient. If there is a fee, scrutinize it closely. If there is a fee for winning or for receiving a certificate or plaque, it could be a scheme simply after your money.

The sole intent of a vanity award scheme is to capitalize on a company's excitement for an award that essentially holds no value with the purpose of making money on the offer. To report a vanity award scheme, visit BBB Scam Tracker at BBB.org/scamtracker.
